LEAGUE'S PLEAOver Thousand Sportsmen Attend Waltonians' Picnic

It is estimated that upward of a thousand persons attended the first annual picnic of the northern Illinois district of the Izak Walton League of America at the Pines yesterday afternoon and evening. The outing was a decided success and there was a general opinion existent that it should be made an annual affair and be extended to take in a larger territory. The program of sports and contests furnished a great deal of amusement and some very acceptable prizes were presented to the winners. The tug-of-war between the different chapters proved a thrilling feature of the program. Bait and fly casting contests attracted the attention of the fishermen.

At 3:30 yesterday afternoon the speaking followed a concert by the famous Kable brothers bank of Mt. Morris. Throughout the program the keynote was sounded favoring the acquisition by the state of historic and beauty spots such as the Pines, Black Hawk's Watch Tower near Rock Island and the Apple River Canyon.

Taft First Speaker
Lorado Taft, famous sculptor, whose summer home is near Oregon was the first to talk. He made a strong plea for the preservation of natural beauty spots throughout the state and the stimulation of interest generally in art extension. The sculptor drew attention to the fact that natural beauty spots are rapidly becoming extinct in Illinois as well as are places which have an important historic surrounding.

Wallace Heckman counsel and business manager of the University of Chicago, dwelt at some length upon the subject of conservation and preservation. The speaker has been connected with the university for a period of 21 years and is intensely interested, as shown during his remarks, in the retaining of the natural beauty which is rapidly becoming commercialized.

James Spencer Dickerson, secretary of the board of managers of the University of Chicago called attention to the rarity and scarcity of state owned historic and beauty parks in Illinois. He called attention to the Pines, stating that as in many other instances the property was of no economic value agriculturally and by its being purchased by the state and converted into a state park, it would last for coming generations.

State Officials Here
E. S. Roach, assistant state fish and game warden of Springfield, was present and spoke for William J. Stratton, head of the department who was unable to attend. Mr. Roach told of the functioning of the department in the propagation of fish and game, the establishment of hatcheries, which he expressed a belief would in a short time result in a hatchery in every county in the state, and assuring the Izak Walton League of the utmost cooperation on the part of the department in bringing about desired and needed conditions. He paid a high tribute to the League nationally for the interest it has taken in a campaign for the principles for which it stands. He also expressed to the League members the appreciation of the state department for the cooperation extended.

At 6 o'clock the basket dinner was enjoyed. There were many present who had come for a few hours but neglected to bring baskets, and through the spirit of good fellowship which prevailed throughout the day, these were taken care of and remained for the evening program. Following the supper, the Kable band furnished another very enjoyable program.

Leagues Purpose Told
Dr. James Latimer Hinford of Geneva, representing the National Izak Walton League was the principal speaker and told of the purposes of the league also calling attention to some of its outstanding accomplishments. He briefly outlined the program of reforestation which is now under way, the clearing of streams of pollution and the preservation or setting aside of historic and beauty spots as state parks for posterity. His talk was an eloquent appeal to the members of the league and their friends to join in the wonderful movement.

E. S. Roach of the state department of fish and game, gave another talk in the evening, in which he spoke of the pollution of streams by which millions of fish are killed each year and outlined the plans which have been thought out to put an end to this practice.

President Gives His Definitions of Words
"Pross": "Reaction"

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Washington, July 19.—Definition of the two commonly used political labels "progressive" and "reactionary" depends, in the opinion of President Coolidge, on the view point of the person endeavoring to make the distinction.

Mr. Coolidge's views as to the two terms were elicited yesterday by a taller who asked him to define the two words. In his reply he said it had become somewhat of a custom in the United States for every person to classify all who disagreed with him politically as a reactionary and added it reminded him the old definition of orthodoxy as "my-doxy" and heterodoxy as "other-doxy."

The President had engagements today for several conferences and proposed to board the Mayflower about mid-afternoon with Mrs. Coolidge, his son John and his father for the customary week-end cruise down the Potomac.

EXPERT'S WORKPersonal Considerations Unknown in Efforts for Peace

London, July 19.—(By the Associated Press.)—"Our work must be and will be approved by the people of the world because always personal considerations were unknown in our efforts to point out the practical, economic and common sense basis of future cooperation between the allies and Germany," Charles G. Dawes declared in a message to his fellow members of the First Experts Committee, made public in part today by Owen D. Young.

"It is my prayer and expectation," said General Dawes, "that the important conference now in session in London will demonstrate that the nations are facing away from the chaos left by the war and from hatred with a determination to be found an enduring and Christian peace based upon common good faith."

Investors in Loan to Germany to be Insured

London, July 19.—(By the Associated Press.)—The committee of the inter-allied conference in charge of sanctions at the event of Germany's default under the Dawes scheme today unanimously agreed to insure investors in the loan to Germany of priority on all German resources in the event of Germany's default.

The committee also unanimously agreed to preserve all the rights enjoyed by the nations which signed the Versailles treaty. These two issues stood in the way of the negotiations of the conference yesterday and the agreement on them, it is believed, will expedite the work of achieving a general agreement on the Dawes plan.

The agreement on the preservation of the rights of the signatories to the Versailles treaty was a concession to Premier Herriot of France and in effect it preserves the right for separate action on the part of France.

BULLETIN

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Washington, July 19.—Senator Wheeler of Montana, who won national distinction by his conduct of the senate Daugherty investigation, accepted the vice presidential nomination on the La Follette Independent ticket today and immediately began his campaign with a broadside against the political affiliations of Calvin Coolidge and John W. Davis.

"I am a democrat, but not a Wall street democrat," he said in a letter formally accepting the nomination tendered him by the group of La Follette leaders in conference here.

The democratic party, he continued, had "wantonly abandoned an opportunity for great public service" and both it and the republican party had "ignored the call of the unorganized millions who are the victims of the present economic disorders."

Thinks It His Duty.

Senator Wheeler's acceptance and his denunciation of the two old line parties were embodied in a letter to William H. Johnston heading a committee sent to him to tender the vice-presidential nomination. The letter follows:

"After consideration I have concluded to accept the honor your committee conferred on me by tendering to me the nomination for vice-president as the running mate of Hon. Robert M. La Follette, candidate for president of the United States.

"I had no desire to become a candidate but have decided that it is my duty to accept your call because it appears that by doing so I can best serve the highest interests of the people.

His Democratic Party
"I regret that the democratic party completely lost sight of the fundamental principles of democracy and ignored the great economic issues of the present hour. It has abandoned an opportunity for great public service.

"While the farmers are facing bankruptcy, labor unemployed, business depressed and a large majority of citizens suffering from sinister economic plottings, the republican and democratic parties ignored the call of the unorganized millions who are the victims of the present economic disorders and chose leaders whose sympathies are with the great predatory interests.

"Every democratic leader has proclaimed the democratic party free from the taint of Wall Street. What are the people to think when the same men select as a standard bearer of their party an attorney who represents these interests, who lives and associates with them and who typifies all that being business stands for, just as much and just as truly as does the republican nominee.

"In this situation, I find myself unable to support either republican or democratic candidate.

"Must Look Elsewhere"
"Between Davis and Coolidge there is only a choice for conservatives to make. The uncontrolled, liberal and progressive forces must look elsewhere for leadership.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Washington, July 19.—Senator Robert M. La Follette, democratic proponent of the senate Daugherty investigation, today announced his acceptance of the vice presidential nomination on the independent presidential ticket, headed by Senator Robert M. La Follette.

Although he had declared he would not accept such a designation, Mr. Wheeler yielded and reversed his decision after he had been urged to do so by Senator La Follette and by several of his principal advisers.

Says "I Will Accept"
"I will accept the nomination," was his first statement announcement of the decision. Then he turned to the preparation of a formal statement setting forth his position to the country and replying to the formal offer extended him by the La Follette leaders.

Several days ago Senator Wheeler announced he could not support John W. Davis, the presidential nominee of his party, although he intended to work for the democratic state ticket in Montana and to give his aid toward the reelection of his colleague, Senator Thomas J. Walsh, prosecutor of the oil committee and chairman of the New York democratic national committee.

La Follette Appealed
Efforts to get Senator Wheeler on the ticket were renewed yesterday after the national committee had assembled here to select a candidate and map out campaign plans and the Daugherty investigation prosecutor promised a definite answer within 24 hours.

It generally had supposed that Mr. Wheeler had eliminated himself from consideration, but Senator La Follette appealed to him personally to change his mind.

Wilburton, Okla., July 19.—State troops were being held in readiness today to respond to a call from county officers, should an attempt be made to carry out a threat received last night from Hartshorne, to shut down by force today the Deaguan and McConnell mine here where fifty men are employed on an open shop basis.

The officers announced determination to prevent a repetition of the trouble at the Cambria mine settlement yesterday when 100 armed miners descended upon Kall-Ina mine, disarmed guards and forced 175 non-union miners to flee their work.

A force of armed deputies was to be placed on guard at the Deaguan and McConnell mine and should they be unable to cope with the situation, officers said, state troops would be called.

Savanna, Ill., July 18.—Irma Dangle, 8, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Dangle, living on a farm three miles north of Savanna was bitten on the leg by a milk snake yesterday while at play in the farm yard.

The child's screams brought her mother in time to see the reptile wiggle off into a patch of shrubbery.

A Savanna physician, called to attend the child, said that while the wound was a painful one there was little danger of any serious results.

The snake's bite near the child's ankle caused the leg and foot to swell to twice their normal size, and it remained in that condition for two hours.

WELL-KNOWN ART
PATRONESS DEAD
IN BOSTON HOMEMrs. "Jack" Gardner
Died at Age of 85
Last Evening

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Boston, July 18.—The death of Mrs. Isabella Stuart Gardner, better known in social and artistic circles as Mrs. "Jack" Gardner, patroness of art and music, caused speculation today as to what disposal will be made of her celebrated collection of paintings and sculptures in her Venetian palace in the Fenway. Mrs. Gardner died at the Palace last night at the age of 85.

Mrs. Gardner was the daughter of David Stuart, of New York, from whom she inherited a fortune, and the widow of John Lowell Gardner, a wealthy Boston resident.

She had been an active supporter of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Fenway Court, her home, was built from Mrs. Gardner's own plans. Its exterior is in the form of a Venetian palace with a walled courtyard and a marble doorway. Most of the stones in the structure were brought from Venice or other parts of Italy and built into it are fragments of sculptures from various parts of Europe.

Within are balconies originally a part of the Card 'Oro Palace in Venice by a Roman pavement, a chapel from a monastery in Veneto, a Gothic refectory pupil from a French monastery and a fragment of Arabic sculpture from the Mosque of Bokhara. In addition to the long gallery in which many of the paintings are exhibited, there are rooms designated as early Italian, Raphael, Dutch, Veronese, Titian and Flemish tapestry.

While his notification will take place in his native town, Mr. Davis has yet to decide his permanent headquarters will be established. Close friends of the candidate believe the final election will be New York City. Sub-headquarters probably will be established at Clarkburg with divisional headquarters in conveniently located cities in the east, northwest and south.

It is fairly well settled that Mr. Davis will make several speaking tours in September.

In selecting Mr. Shaver as the marshal of his field forces, Mr. Davis chose a life-long friend and the man who launched his candidacy for his first political office—membership in congress—and who twice placed his name before national conventions—unsuccessfully in 1920, and successfully in 1924.

Pledge Illinois Miners'
Aid to Kentucky Strikers

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Center City, Ky., June 19.—Miners in Illinois will do everything in their power to aid striking union miners of Kentucky, State Senator William J. Sneed of Herrin, Illinois told a meeting of miners here last night.

The miners here are out on strike against reductions which they allege the operators are attempting to force. International President John L. Lewis, who is touring the region with Mr. Sneed, told miners that the union would accept no wage reduction and that the operators were resorting to subterfuge to give the impression that they could not operate their mines at the present scale.

"Western Kentucky operators say they cannot pay the present scale and compete with Illinois and Indiana coal, but the Illinois and Indiana operators say they cannot compete with Kentucky coal so their arguments go in circles," Mr. Lewis said.

DAVIS TAKES TO WOODS TO PREPARE
HIS FIRST SPEECHWill Fire First Gun of Campaign When Notified, Aug. 11

On Board Rockland Express, En Route For Islesboro, Maine, July 19.—Having selected his campaign manager, Clem L. Shaver of West Virginia, and fixed August 11 as the date of his formal notification John W. Davis, was speeding northward today through Maine in search of solitude in which to study out his address accepting the democratic presidential nomination.

His destination is Seven Hundred Acre Island, off Rockland, the summer home of Charles Dana Gibson, whose guests he and Mrs. Davis will be for the next ten days. Returning to New York he will put his address in writing before departing for Clarkburg, W. Va., where the notification ceremonies will be held.

To Fire First Gun.
In determining upon August 11 as the date for his official notification, Mr. Davis has elected to fire the first broadside of the 1924 campaign.

President Coolidge will not be notified formally of his nomination until a week later. Both ceremonies will take place at night so that the vast radio audience over the country may listen in.

During his stay at the Gibson home Mr. Davis will not devote his time wholly to work. There will be frequent rounds of golf.

With Mr. Shaver now actively on the job, the nominee has laid aside, for the time being at least, the cares of campaign organization. Mr. Davis is accompanied by his close friend and confidential adviser, Frank L. Polk, under-secretary of state in the Wilson administration.

At the end of his 16 hours journey, Mr. Davis had an hour's steamer trip to Dark Harbor, with a transfer there to a power yacht for the short run to Seven Hundred Acre Island.

Central Strategy Board.
While Mr. Davis is there, his campaign manager will go forward with the completion of the campaign organization along plans which have been worked out at conference among the nominee, his managers and a number of party leaders. There is to be a central board of strategy, directing district organizations in the four main sections of the country.

While his notification will take place in his native town, Mr. Davis has yet to decide his permanent headquarters will be established. Close friends of the candidate believe the final election will be New York City. Sub-headquarters probably will be established at Clarkburg with divisional headquarters in conveniently located cities in the east, northwest and south.

It is fairly well settled that Mr. Davis will make several speaking tours in September.

R. J. Henry of Franklin Grove had one of the several fancy shipments of Herford heifers at the Chicago stock yards which sold at the highest price paid for this class of stock on July 15 which was $9.50 per hundredweight. Mr. Henry's shipment numbered 32 head and averaged 698 pounds. They were as smooth as peas and looked as if there was hardly any difference in weight between the different animals. The heifers were handled without any punpering and proved extra good doing cattle, as well as making a good financial outcome.

Very few people in Dixon realize that they had in their midst the largest printers of college annuals in the country. The Rogers Printing Company, since its organization in 1908, has specialized in the printing of school and college annuals and high grade catalog work.

The attractive four color athletic posters, which are also on display represent the latest addition to the Rogers line of work. This set of athletic posters is rated as the finest in the country by the Art Crafts Guild, which is an organization of the engravers of the Middle West. Leaving the institution they took a boat and crossed the river, and upon landing, several attendants were waiting for them.

Lacuag was armed with an old butcher knife and Vogel with a piece of an oar and both men stood off the increasing crowd for some minutes before they were taken in custody. Members of the sheriff's force and police were summoned to the scene to assist in disarming the troublesome pair, but both had been taken in charge before the officers arrived. They were taken back to the institution.

The blow was struck with a cold chisel wrapped with tape and Leopold drove the automobile in which they were riding.

At first each accused the other of striking the fatal blow. Loeb, the newspaper says, made the additional confession after learning the penalty which was the actual slayer.

Earlier dispatches from Washington announced that Mrs. Imbrie had reported the death of Major Imbrie vice-consul in charge at Teheran. Her message to the Department gave no details. REBEKAH SEWING CLUB HAD FINE PICNIC

(Contributed.)
The Rebekah Sewing club enjoyed a very happy picnic Thursday afternoon at Assembly Park. At 8:30 o'clock sixty Rebekahs, Odd Fellows and members of their families sat down to the long table which was loaded down with good things to eat, prepared by the Rebekahs. Visitors were E. P. Geiger, an Odd Fellow from Mt. Vernon, Iowa, and his nephew, Walter Geiger, and wife of Boston, Mass., members of the I. O. O. F. orders there.

After the supper the president, Sister Hope Coss, called the meeting to order and a short business session was held, election of new officers being the feature. May Bertram was chosen, president; Miss Margaret Irey, vice-president; Miss Ella Kentner, secretary and treasurer; and Mrs. Emma Morris, press correspondent for the next six months. The club then adjourned to meet the first Thursday in September, when the work for the coming half year will be planned.

STUNT NIGHT TO YOUNG PEOPLES MEET

Thursday night was "Stunt Night" at the Presbyterian, young people's camp and amusements were put on by the delegates from various towns and the Sterling boys, assisted by several young men from Dixon, presented one of the funniest of the lot.

They put on a "Henry Ford" cabinet, Robert Honens impersonating Mr. Ford and others impersonating W. J. Bryan and other notables who, in their opinion, probably would have been members of Mr. Ford's cabinet had he been elected president. The cabinet was called to order on the platform and the affairs of the nation were settled with speed and absolute satisfaction to everybody under the sun, or almost everybody.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS—

Banishes Cooking Odors.
An electric fan will banish the odors of cooking from a room if you place it so it draws in air from an open window and blows the odors up.

Packing the Trunk.

When packing a trunk, put all heavy square articles against the four corners and the irregular packages and shoes on the bottom. All hollow articles may be filled with clothing.

Good Salad Dressing.

An excellent cream mayonnaise dressing is made by whipping a cup of sour cream until it is stiff and adding to it one cup of mayonnaise dressing. It should be kept in a cold place and used within a few hours after it is made.

Examine Electric Wiring.

Have your electrical wiring examined occasionally to see there are no defects that may cause a loss of current.

Jade green crepe is the material used for this attractive gown. It introduces the popular braid trimming in white on the neck, sleeves and pocket. This type of gown will be excellent style all fall and as far ahead in the winter as style artists can look.

FORMER PASTOR OF DIXON CHURCH HITS INDIFFERENCE

Dr. Joseph Fort Newton Urges Campaign to Make People Vote

"If the present neglect" of the ballot by qualified electors of the land goes on unchecked, it will mean the bankruptcy of democracy and the failure of popular government," declares Dr. Joseph Fort Newton, former pastor of the Peoples' church in this city, in a letter to The Homiletic Review of New York, in commenting on a proposed campaign to make Christians vote. Reviewing the discussion in The Review the Literary Digest features Dr. Newton's treatise and publishes his picture. The Digest says:

"Government is of God," or should be, and it is a "part of a Christian man's duty to vote—to vote as he prays." Yet, we are told, it seems to be a fact that less than half the electorate of the country cast their ballots at a general election. As it is a matter of common knowledge that the majority of those who remain away from the polls and afterwards become the current government's severest critics are the "church" voters. This apathy, says The Homiletic Review (New York), constitutes one of the greatest menaces to an intelligently governed democracy, and The Review is, therefore, starting a campaign among the churches to bring out the total Christian vote and cast it at the Presidential election next November. As a preliminary test, its purpose was called to the attention of a small number of "representative" statesmen, educators, ministers, and a few laymen, and a desire for their co-operation was expressed. It may be of some significance that "the statesmen have been silent and unresponsive." Educators and ministers, on the other hand, have been singularly prompt, earnest, explicit, and cordial in their replies and with few exceptions, quite concordant. The Review is, therefore, proceeding with its crusade, and is printing registration cards in which ministers pledge themselves to try to have 100 per cent of their congregations cast their votes in the coming Presidential election. The effort is non-partisan, and it is not intended, we are told, to influence the voter's individual preference for candidates, or to bring the church as an organization into politics.

"The day must come," says President Marion LeRoy Burton of the University of Michigan, "when the principles of religion are applied to our responsibilities as servants of the public." Indeed, he urged, "In a democracy, our civilization must depend on a high type of intelligence in every community. Moreover, that intelligence must come to expression. Emphasis must be placed not upon our right to vote, but upon our duty. Whether we like it or not, it is the solemn obligation of everyone, who lays claim to the privilege of citizenship in our country to exercise intelligently his right as a voter. Sometimes we hear ministers of the churches express the opinion that the church's duty is in the field of religion and that it ought to let politics alone. Any such sharp demarcation between the two fields reveals a curious and narrow interpretation of religion. I can not conceive of any movement which would be more genuinely significant to our country than for the Christian churches of the land to make up their mind that every member, through an active and vigorous campaign, would see to it that he performed fully his functions at the ballot box."

Editor of "Century"
More urgent, however, than the mere getting of church members to vote, writes Glenn Frank, editor of the Century Magazine to The Review, is the need for the church to clarify its own mind on the now crucial matters of the politics and industry of war and peace. As things are now, "we are witnessing a tragic paralysis and prostitution of political leadership in many parts of western civilization. It is important that the church furnish to politics the sort of social statesmanship for our time that the old Hebrew prophets gave theirs. Dr. Charles S. MacFarland, general secretary of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, is "sure that nothing could be more important, in view of the present issues before the nation and their moral, and indeed, in the broad sense of the word, religious significance, than to secure a complete expression of the Christian spirit of the country." We can never have the sort of government described in Lincoln's phrase, says Dr. C. L. Godell, of the Commission on Evangelism and Life Service, "until the average man and woman put their civic obligations as a part of their moral duty. It is only when good people are good for something that iniquity is overthrown. It has passed to be a proverb that no reform administration succeeds itself. Reform is only a span, while evil persists year after year." Steiner stuff comes from Dr. Joseph Fort Newton, internationally known preacher and author, formerly of the City Temple, London, and now pastor of the Church of the Divine Paternity, New York City.

What Newton Says
"The neglect of the ballot, which is at once the wand and the weapon of democracy, is nothing short of appalling. Taking all kinds of elections into account, hardly more than 35 per cent of our people who are entitled to vote ever vote on any issue. The facts show that it is not the foreign born element that fail to vote, but people of American ancestry and training. It is just indifference, a lack of public-mindedness, a failure to realize the basic obligation of citizenship, which makes the saying of Lincoln, that this is a government of the people, for the people, by the people, a farce. It delivers the public life of the land into the hands of the boss, the selfish politician who herds the few in order to use the machinery of state for his own ends. "If the various churches will lay off their theological disputes long enough to urge upon their people the initial duty, they can render a real service to the republic. A citizenship Sunday, or some such arrangement, used to make men realize that the duties of a citizen are sacramental, greatly needed, and will do good. A brief, impressive ritual, or ceremony, for the initiation of first voters, laying emphasis upon the sanctity of the ballot by a formal introduction into its privileges, would help. Every instrumentality, every organization, should be used to induce men and women to vote as a religious obligation, no less than a duty of citizenship."

"It is not the business of the church to tell people how to vote, but it ought to exhort them to vote in some way, and if need be organize to that end. If the present neglect goes on unchecked, it will mean the bankruptcy of democracy and the failure of popular government."

NO "TAG DAYS" FOR THEM.

When colleges need money, they usually all lustily for contributions from outsiders.
A remarkable genius must have charge of Antioch College at Yellow Springs, Ohio.
His school has the purpose of making itself self-supporting—paying its own way.

Antioch's latest addition to its co-operative system, of providing work for needy students, will be a shoe factory on the campus. This factory will enable students to work their way through college.

Also the factory will be a practical university of business. Student-workers will learn production, management, salesmanship.
The ultimate ambition of the average institution of higher learning seems to be to have many monumental buildings as students.
Much outside aid naturally is required.

It might be better to spend the money on the students' education and do the teaching in wooden barracks like the army training camps. After all, a college is a knowledge factory. As in all other production systems the thing that counts most is the product rather than the place where it is made.

The Athenians developed "pure intellectualism" to a higher degree than ever before or since. Socrates and his satellites and brother-planets exchanged ideas and educated the young. They did it outdoors, in public —didn't think they needed a million-dollar building.

We are not opposed to fine college and university buildings. Decidedly, not. But the system is out of balance, when the ambitious poor student cannot afford a college course unless he goes in debt or waits on table or sells books in spare time. The millions that are theoretically contributed to help him each him only feebly and indirectly.

Colleges, fortunately, are awakening to the need of providing work for students who haven't enough money to pay expenses.

The goal of every college should be sufficient fine buildings for instruction and a comprehensive system of factories or farms or helping the worthy student earn enough to pay his way. That's all those students want—the opportunity to help themselves.

CONFISCATED.

Taxes on farm lands are rapidly approaching the point where they will absorb all profit from crops grown on the land. So warns an expert of the institute for Research in Land Economics.

The economist he predicts is already in effect in many parts of the country where farmers do not even break even.

But taxation is not the only form of farm confiscation. Others are land speculation, over-production and unfairly low market prices. Our greatest and most fundamental industry, agriculture, is in process of being paralyzed.

POISON.

Carbon monoxide, the poison gas in auto exhaust, can be made almost harmless by using a small amount of an inexpensive chemical compound mixed with the gasoline. This is the claim of Dr. Miller Reese Hutchinson, the prominent inventor. He doesn't say what the compound is. Probably soon be for sale.

If Hutchinson really has conquered this poison, he is giving the world something beyond price. Thousands are killed yearly by carbon monoxide while running their cars in the garage with doors closed. Furthermore, the poison exhaust from millions of autos, being heavier than air, clings near the ground and attacks the health of all who use city streets.

THE LURE OF CLOTHES.

Helen Gwynne, retiring of the national industrial branch of the Y. W. C. A., advises working girls to wear gaudy clothes and be aggressive.

"The demure, submissive working girl doesn't get very far in factories or matrimony," she says. Where the rich girl, amid luxurious surroundings, may have her charms set off better by dressing simply, the working girl must wear bright colors in order to call attention to herself.

This is a matter on which a newspaper naturally speaks with diffidence, leaving authoritative pronouncements to feminine specialists. From cursory observation, however, it looks as if all the girls, whether in factories, homes or offices, are much in need of Miss Gwynne's advice. They have beaten her to it.

EASY.

Twenty years ago U. S. Steel common stock sold at less than 9 and its preferred stock at a trifle under 52. Recently the common has been around 96, preferred 118.

Speculators pounce on such fabulous multiplication like a man taking whisky to stimulate his courage. But don't forget the stocks that never rise in value. Nor the greater number that gradually slough away to worth-lessness on the precedent of minority cases.

It's human nature to base opinions or acknowledging the majority.

MISTAKE.

its New York and brings his enemies along as his bodyguard. This makes it sure they won't start trouble at home in his absence.

He says: "Unlike the late President Wilson, I am bringing my Lodge and Hitchcock with me."

The fatal blunder in Wilson's career was his not taking Lodge, Root and a few other Republican leaders to the peace conference with him. If he had, America might be in the League of Nations today.

Mister Woodchuck stopped in front of the fun house.

One of the most interesting places
Nancy and Nick were helping Mister
Zip, the fairyman, was the fun house.
You went in by crawling through a barrel and when you got in the middle of it, it began to spin around like a hoop, upsetting you and rolling you over and over like a dice in a dice box.

When finally you got inside there was a sign which said "The Puzzle Patch." It looked as easy as pie when you went in. But it wasn't so easy, as the fly found out when he got caught in the spider-web.

For the passages twisted and turned this way and that and you always met yourself coming back.
You were lucky, if you got out in half an hour.

And then there were the funny mirrors that made you fat or bow-legged or even turned you upside down.

Now fat, dignified Mrs. Wood-chuck said that never, never, never would she go to Happy Go Lucky Park again after Nick took her picture and got Mrs. Bunny's ears in it by mistake.

But one day Mister Woodchuck and the children coaxed and coaxed her until she said finally, "All right, I'll go then. But remember—no nonsense."

Mister Woodchuck stopped in front of the fun house. "This looks pretty good. Let's go in," he said.
"Looks silly," said Mrs. Wood-chuck in a resigned voice. "But I'm in for it now. Go on if you want to."

So with whoops of delight the little Woodchuck boys and fat Mr.
Woodchuck went in and got rolled around in the barrel and thought it was fine fun.

LETTER FROM SALLY AHERN
TO JAMES CONDON.

The love part of your letter, dear
Jim, was very poetic and beautiful and I think my greatest happiness was that I have not become so hard-

"I'll do nothing of the sort," said Mrs. Woodchuck when they coaxed her to come along.

"There's another door," said Nancy. "Go in that way."

And the first thing you know wasn't Mrs. Woodchuck lost in "The Puzzle Patch."

And get out she couldn't. She wandered around and around and finally shouted, "Help! And Nancy had to go in and rescue her."

Then came the mirrors. And the first one made you look like a wash-tub. Mrs. Woodchuck was fat enough, dear knows, and she shrieked when she saw herself "lands alive! Take me away," she cried.

"Come on and try this one, Ma," shouted Wobblly. "It will make you thin."

"I'll do nothing of the sort," snapped Mrs. Woodchuck, getting crosser and crosser. "I've no notion of being made a goose of any more."

"Then come on over here," called Mister Woodchuck who was standing on a little bridge.

So panting indignantly, Mrs.
Woodchuck followed.

But no sooner had she reached the middle of the bridge than it folded up with her and then instantly set itself to rights again, for it was a trick bridge.

"Take me home! Take me home!"
wailed poor Mrs. Woodchuck. "This is a terrible place."

"Why, you haven't seen half, Mom," said Wobblly, who was having a gorgeous time.

"That's twice too much," snapped Mrs. Woodchuck, and home she marched.

My eyes grew misty as I read it, and I think, dear boy, that I was a little never had anyone to whom I could talk like that and mean it. I don't think I'm capable of it.

The utter sincerity of your devo-

That you are a worshiper at a false of clay, does not take anything from

So you thought Jack Prescott looked at me as though I belonged to him?
Jim, in the language of the street, if Jack Prescott has any such thought as that, he has another thing coming.
I don't belong to any one except Sally Atherton.

He amuses me; his arrogance and conceit are so colossal. Many, many times, knowing Leslie as I do, I know the wonderful plans he brings down and retails to me as conceptions of his own, are something she has put into his head.

He's a clever chap for all that, and I probably shall go to lunch and dine with him again and again, dear boy, whatever people may say. I may be martyred in the coming years for my assumption that a woman may do exactly what a man may do without any more compunction than a man, and get away with it. But all the same, I'm going to live along this line as long as I do live.

Of course I know that it is fortunate that I am hard headed, but I have schooled myself to be and to think like a man. Whenever I find myself growing in sentiment, I immediately try to be as sentimental as possible. Men are always sentimental, but they haven't much sentiment.

Women, on the other hand, are less apt to be moved by their emotions, but they have a great deal of that tenderness and loyalty which to me is sentiment.

Jim, dear Jim, don't think of me too much, for I'm not worth it, as conventional worth goes. I'm just a woman who is determined to succeed, determined to do the thing she wants to do, and just now that thing is to be one of the best known advertising experts in the country.

Come again and see me. I'll try not to hurt you, but don't expect me to break my engagements for you—that's not businesslike.

Affectionately,
SALLY.

SYNOPSIS

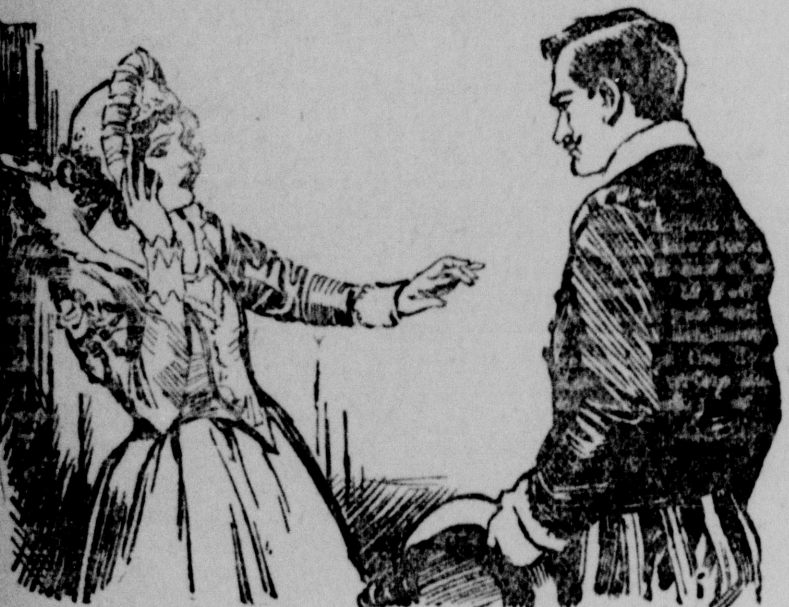

Sir Oliver Tremaine, torn between his duties as the Spanish Main, is betrothed to Rosamund Godolphin, but because of personal animosity growing out of land disputes the marriage is opposed by Rosamund's brother, Peter, and her guardian, Sir John Killigrew. Oliver, incensed at Sir John's references to him as a "pirate," engages him in a duel and defeats him. He then proceeds to Godolphin Court to apprise Rosamund of the affair.

CHAPTER II—Continued

He found her in her bower—a light, turret chamber on the mansion's eastern side, with windows that looked out upon that lovely sheet of water and the wooded slopes beyond.

She rose with a little exclamation of gladness when he appeared under the lintel—scarce high enough to admit him without stooping—and stood regarding him across the room with brightened eyes and flushing cheeks.

Like her brother, she was tawny headed and she was divinely tall.

"He saw horror leap to her eyes and blanch her face."

though as yet her figure in its girlishness was almost too slender for her height.

"I had not looked for you so early"—she was beginning, when she observed that his countenance was oddly stern.

"Why—what has happened?" she cried, her intuitions clamoring loudly of some mischance.

"Naught to alarm you, sweet; yet something that may vex you."

He set an arm about that lissom waist of hers above the swelling garthingale, and gently led her back to her chair, then flung himself upon the window-seat beside her.

"You hold Sir John Killigrew in some affection?" he said between statement and inquiry.

"Why, yes. He was our guardian until my brother came of full age."

Sir Oliver made a wry face.

"Aye, there's the rub. Well, I've all but killed him."

She drew back into her chair, reeling before him, and he saw horror leap to her eyes and blanch her face. He made haste to explain the causes that had led to this; he told her briefly of the calumnies concerning him that Sir John had put about to vent his spite at having been thwarted in the matter of his coveted license to build at Smith-ick.

"That mattered little," he concluded. "I knew these tales concerning me were abroad, and I held them in the same contempt as I hold their utterer. But he went further, Rose; he poisoned your brother's mind against me, and he stirred up in him the slumbering rancor that in my father's time was wont to lie between our houses. Today Peter came to me with the clear intent to make a quarrel. He affronted me as no man has ever dared."

She cried out at that, her already great alarm redoubled. He smiled. "Do not suppose that I could harm him. He is your brother, and so, sacred to me. He came to tell me that he betrothed me to his sister, but that he had no intention of doing so. He came to tell me that he betrothed me to his sister, but that he had no intention of doing so. He came to tell me that he betrothed me to his sister, but that he had no intention of doing so."

he may profit by his lesson. I have come straight to you," he concluded, "that you may hear the tale from me before another comes to malign me with false stories of this happening."

"You—you mean Peter?" she cried.

"Alas!" he sighed. She sat very still and white, looking straight before her and not at all at Sir Oliver. At length she spoke.

"I am not skilled in reading men," she said in a sad, small voice. "How should I be, that am but a maid who has led a cloistered life? I was told of you that you were violent and passionate, a man of bitter enemies, easily stirred to hatred, cruel and ruthless in the persecution of them."

"You, too, have been listening to Sir John," he muttered, and laughed shortly.

"All this I was told," she pursued as if he had not spoken, "and all did I refuse to believe because my heart was given to you. Yet—yet of what have you made proof today?"

He set himself to explain.

"I have told you what Sir John had done. I have told you that the greater part of it—and matter all that touched my honor—I know Sir John to have done long since. Yet

I suffered it in silence and contempt. Was that to show myself easily stirred to ruthlessness? What was it but forbearance? When, however, he carries his petty huckster's rancor so far as to seek to choke for me my source of happiness in life and sends your brother to affront me, I am still so forbearing that I recognize your brother to be no more than a tool and go straight to the hand that wielded him. Because I know of your affection for Sir John I gave him such latitude as no man of honor in England would have given him."

Then seeing that she still avoided his regard, still sat in that frozen attitude of horror at learning that the man she loved had imbued his hands with the blood of another whom she also loved, his pleading quickened to a warmer note.

"Rose," he cried, and his deep voice quivered with intercession, "dismiss all that you have heard from out your mind. Consider only this thing that has befallen. Suppose that Lionel, my brother, came to you and that, having some measure of power and authority to support him, he swore to you that you should never wed me, swore to prevent this marriage because he deemed you such a woman as could not bear my name with honor to myself; and suppose that to all this he added insult to the memory of your dead father, what answer would you return him?"

Her eyes scanned now his face, every line of which was pleading to her and calling for impartial judgment. Her face grew troubled, and then almost fierce. She set her hands upon his shoulders and looked deep into his eyes.

"You swear to me, Nell, that all is as you have told it me—you have added naught, you have altered naught to make the tale more favorable to yourself?"

"You need such oaths from me?" he asked, and she saw sorrow spread upon his countenance.

"If I did I should not love thee, Nell. But in such an hour I need your assurance. Will you not be generous and bear with me, strengthen me to withstand anything that may be said hereafter?"

"As God's my witness, I have told you true in all," he answered solemnly.

"Then," she said, "I believe you acted rightly. I believe with you that no man of honor could have acted otherwise. I must believe you, Nell, for did I not then I could believe in naught and hope for naught. I am content as you be true."

"True I shall ever be, sweet heart," he whispered fervently.

THREE LEADERS IN AMERICAN BECOME CLANNISH EACH DAY

Maintain Positions in Vanguard of Rest of Teams in League

By The Associated Press

Day by day, in every way, the three leaders in the American League become more exclusive and clannish. New York today leads both Washington and Detroit by one game, while the Tigers have left Chicago six games in the rear. Cobb's team climbed to the level occupied by the Senators while the latter were losing to St. Louis and the Yankees were staging a no-decision double header with Cleveland.

Sherrill Smith, south pawed, the Yankees to add easy 9-2 win in the opener and Pennock portended the tribe to a 7-2 defeat in the final.

A timely triple by Jacobson with the bases full in the ninth enabled St. Louis to gather in a belated victory over Washington, 7-6.

After saving the game for Detroit with a spectacular leaping catch in the ninth, Maunsh singled and scored the winning run in the eleventh for a 4-3 triumph over Boston.

Holding Chicago to six hits, Baumgartner was the prime mover in Philadelphia's 4-3 win over Chicago. Mostil's two base miff of Perkins' fly in the fifth paved the way for the deciding tally.

Giants Lost Again

Pittsburgh had the Giants realize they still have some competition in the National League by trimming the New Yorkers for the second time in succession. The final count was 9-2.

Adams played a lone, but effective hand in the Cubs' victory over Philadelphia by 2-1 in ten innings. His single in the sixth scored the first run and his second one-base accounted for the deciding marker in the final frame. It was a tense pitchers' battle with the honors evenly divided between Deschager and Betts of the Phillies and Aldridge of Chicago.

Rixey extended his string of white-wash innings to 31 as he shut out Brooklyn with three hits by 4-0.

St. Louis advanced to sixth place over the heads of the Banerfords Braves by hammering out a 10-4 victory.

Final in Illinois Tennis Tourney to be East vs. West

By Associated Press Leased Wire

Chicago, July 19.—The final match in the men's singles of the Illinois state tennis championship tournament will be a clash between east and west, regardless of the results of today's play in the semi-finals. William Tiden II, of Philadelphia, national champion, is favored to win over Alfred H. Chapin of Springfield, Mass., while one western contender will be eliminated in the match between Howard Kinsey of San Francisco and Brian I. C. Norton of St. Louis.

Chicago is considered to have a chance to take the men's doubles title since the defeat of Tilden and Sandy Weiner, his youthful protégé by Lott and Graven, Chicagoans, who met the Australians, Patterson and Wood in today's play. Howard and Robert Kinsey, the Californians are scheduled to meet Norton and Brown, St. Louis or Westbrook and Snodgrass, Pacific coast team, in the other doubles contest.

Ruth Dunscombe of Lake Forest annexed the girls' title in the singles and Johnny Farrin and Julian Jackson, Chicago, took the boys' doubles title in yesterday's play. Sandy Weiner, Philadelphia, and Emmet Pore, Chicago, survived the semi-finals in the junior singles and Jesse Marion Leighton and Mrs. Leo Altier, Chicago, were victors in the semi-finals of the women's singles play.

Maranville Making Fine Record at Base

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Pittsburgh, Pa., July 19.—Switched from his regular position at shortstop to give way to a promising recruit, Walter Maranville, the Rabbit of big league baseball, has chalked up an imposing record of 23 errorless games at the keystone since the Pirates' last credit record of 161 chances without a slip.

The Pirates, listed during the spring training season as strong pennant contenders, were rated lower by the experts when the recruit, Wright, replaced Maranville at short stop. Followers of the team contended that Maranville, taken from his natural position, was a question mark when placed on second.

But both Wright and Maranville have demonstrated their ability, especially the Rabbit, to hold down the posts assigned them.

On June 25 last, Maranville, in a 14 inning game against Chicago, fumbled a ground ball, one of 16 chances thrown his way that day. The official scorer decided it was an error. Since then the Rabbit has fielded the ball from all angles and positions without a slip. The records show that in 23 consecutive games he has made 63 putouts and 38 assists, with the error column showing blank.

Colony Team Playing at St. Charles Today

The Dixon state colony baseball team and a large delegation of employees at the institution went by auto this morning to St. Charles, where this evening they will meet the club from the State Boys' School. St. Charles claims to have one of the strongest clubs among the state institutions and Dixon has the reputation of winning more games than any of the others, which indicates a hard fought battle. St. Charles is booked for a return game here next week.

BABE RUTH TAKES LEAD OF LEAGUE BATTERS IN WEEK

Bambino Setting Pace for Sluggers of American League

By Associated Press Leased Wire

Chicago, July 19.—Babe Ruth who, in 1921, gave the baseball world some thing to talk about when he slammed out 59 home runs, today has a right to stick his bulging chest out just a bit farther. The Bambino has crashed in to the batting leadership of the American League with an average of .384, leaving "Bib" Falk of the White Sox, the leader a week ago, in second place with .369.

Ruth, in his climb to the top, gathered seventeen hits in his last nine games, four of which were homers. That gives him a total of 108 hits thus far this season and a string of 26 homers. The high mark of the major leagues. The figures are based on games including those of Wednesday.

Goslin of Washington elevated himself to third place with an average of .353, followed by Ty Cobb with .349. Jameson of Cleveland slipped into place with .347. Maurice Arch-deon, outfield star with the White Sox, is batting .386, but has only paraded in 13 games.

Eddie Collins of Chicago continues to blaze the way for the base stealers, adding three for a total of 24, a safe margin over his rivals. Other leading batters:

Sheely, Chicago, .338; Heilmann, of Detroit, .336; Jacobson, St. Louis, .329; Mostil, Chicago, .322; J. Sewell, Cleveland, .320; Speaker, Cleveland, .319; Meusel, New York, .328; Collins, Chicago, .326; Judge, Washington, .325.

George Kelly, first baseman with the New York Giants was the week's sensation in the National League. He made seven home runs in six consecutive days, which is a new major league record and now has fourteen homers to his credit. Despite his hard hitting, however, he moved up the ladder only a few points in percentage being topped by his teammate, Snyder, who is in third place, with an average of .364. Kelly's mark is .360.

Roger Hornsby of St. Louis is still above the .400 mark, his average being .401, giving him a comfortable lead. His closest rival is Zack Wheat of Brooklyn with second with .375.

Jack Fournier, a team mate of Wheat's in his attempt to overtake Ruth for the home run honors, pounded out four circuit drives running his string to 21.

Max Carey of the Pirates cut loose on the base lines and a result ran his total of stolen bases to 23, giving him a substantial lead.

Other leading batters:
Young, New York, .352; Fournier, Brooklyn, .350; Roush, Cincinnati, .345; Bressler, Cincinnati, .342; Grigsby, Chicago, .332; Erlich, New York, .329; Cunningham, Boston, .329.

Mandell Forced to the Limit to Win His Bout

Chicago, July 19.—Sammy Mandell, Rockford, was forced to step the liveliest ten rounds of his ring career last night in an East Chicago arena when he met Joe Azzerella, Milwaukee. Although the "Rockford Flash" was winner at the end of the ten rounds and Azzerella was dazed and had to be led to his corner, the Rockford had been forced to extend himself.

Azzerella was credited with winning the second and third rounds and holding the title aspirant even in the first and seventh. A cut on Azzerella's forehead received in the third round hampered him during the remainder of the match.

In the other ten-round match Harold Smith, Chicago boxing for the first time in ten months, owing to an injury, obtained a draw with Johnny McCoy, Cleveland.

WILLS IS CHIEF ATTRACTION NOW IN TENNIS GAMES

Expected to Clinch the Olympic Championship in Finals Sunday

Paris, July 19.—(By the Associated Press.)—Miss Helen Wills, the young American tennis champion, is the attraction in the Olympic championships and tomorrow, in her final match of the tournament with Mlle Emmeline Vlasto, of France, the United States star is expected to romp home with the women's singles trophy.

While the experts are of the opinion that the California girl will defeat Mlle Vlasto, the outcome is not by any means certain. Mlle Vlasto yesterday sprang one of the surprises of the tournament by conquering the Wimbledon champion, Miss Kathleen McKane. If she continues her fast game tomorrow, it is likely that the American champion may have her hands full.

In Crest of Form.

The American girl apparently is at the crest of her form now.

American players are also in the running for the other four Olympic titles. Vincent Richards tomorrow will play Henri Cochet of France, for the men's singles championship and will pair with Hunter this afternoon in the men's semi-finals doubles match against Borotra and LaCosta of France.

This afternoon Miss Wills, paired with Mrs. George Wightman, will oppose Miss McKane and Mrs. Phyllis Covell, for the doubles championship. America's representatives in the mixed doubles semi-finals are R. Norris Williams, I and Mrs. Wightman.

The swimming competition today and tomorrow will be virtually an anti-climax because the United States by sweeping victories in four of the five finals rolled up an overwhelming margin over her nearest rival, Sweden and clinched the team championship.

When today's events began the Americans had 116 points to 39 for Sweden.

Research in Study of Education Needed

Urbana, Illinois.—Educational research, a scientific study of problems of the modern school, in an attempt to improve educational practice, will become one of the most important factors in school administration in the next few years, according to Professor Walter S. Monroe, director of the Bureau of Educational Research at the University of Illinois.

"Although the results of educational research have not been as spectacular as those in the physical sciences, they are equally as important," Professor Monroe said.

"We are developing a commanding body of information which is beginning to influence educational practices. Experimentation and other types of research represent the spirit of the time. Changes which are destined to have far reaching effects are being introduced into our schools as the result of educational research."

The most important fundamental service which research is able to give the schools is the ability to think steadily and clearly about educational matters, according to Professor Monroe.

"It appears that there is developingly engaged in educational research have no responsibility for thinking about educational questions, since they have only to look to those who are prepared to carry on investigations for the answer, and when a question has been answered by research it may be labeled as settled, thereby disturbing not a whit the peace of mind. This is an unfortunate tendency and if not checked it will lead to a type of scientific dogmatism comparable to that of the Middle Ages."

"Since 1914, Professor Monroe said, many school systems have created research departments whose function it is to study as scientifically as possible educational questions which arise. In addition, many colleges have established departments for the specific purpose of carrying on educational research."

"Educational research is a whole some progressive tendency to question traditional practice. It aims at departure from theorizing about educational problems, and it will grow to an indispensable department of our state and national school system."

Correct Clothes To Meet The Obligation Of Every Occasion

That Matching Habit

Americans, who have invented the highest thing in the world, the sky-scraping building, and the lowest the cuspidor, have also invented the habit of matching one article of dress with another. There is something about it which seems to appear peculiarly and powerfully to our fondness for orderliness and precision. Thus, the scarf matches in pattern and color to the handkerchief, ill-treated here, is one of the outstanding fashion of Summer.

Both scarf and handkerchief are made of English hand-locked foulard silk in a spotted design. The edges of each may be flared or set off with a plain-colored border, as reproduced in the sketch. Of course, when placed side by side the effect is not as repos-essing as when the scarf is knotted and the handkerchief peeps from the breast pocket.

This matching idea may be carried still farther by having the hat-band of the same color and pattern as cravat and handkerchief. Or, handkerchief, hat-band, four-in-hand scarf and bow-knot tie may all harmonize. You can go as you please, yet please as you go.

There is as much difference between the Summer scarf and the Winter scarf as there is between light-weight woolsens and heavy-weight. The cravat for hot weather should be selected both for its lightness of weight and its lightness of color. Bright shades, subconsciously, induce a sense of coolness; dark shades are, somehow, as depressing upon the wearer as they are upon the eye of the observer. Choose only light-weight, light-colored scarfs and the bolder you can stand them the better they will look.

The cravat of thin silk is best upheld in the soft collar by a gold safety pin firmly fastened under the knot. Otherwise, the scarf has a tendency to draw away from the collar and must be continually re-tightened. The old-fashioned cravat-clasp is virtually out of use. It was too clumsy and conspicuous. Flat, thin oblong clasps of gold wire are now used and, being attached to the under apron of the scarf, they are invisible.

members and by said Board of Local Improvements and its members, to be required to meet the accruing interest on bonds and vouchers issued to anticipate the collection of the assessment, and the necessary expenses for said work.

Said certificate also shows that said work has been done and completed by the contractor doing the work in substantial conformity to the requirements of said Ordinance and has been duly accepted by said Council and its members and by said Board and its members.

The final cost of said improvement and the amount estimated for interest as shown by said certificate are as follows:

THE JEWELLED CASKET

I SUPPOSE that the same quality of imagination which lifts me above the rest of those whom society is pleased to call outlaws, is responsible for the feeling of indignation which possesses me when I look upon any brutality. I am not matter-of-fact; I am an artist. And the artist, more keenly in tune with what ought to be than the material-minded man of business, resents any imperfection, whether it be of the body or of the spirit.

And here were both! The hunchback, imperfect of body—and the superstitious lout, imperfect of spirit, who stroked the hump.

They were standing on the curb at the corner of Fifty-ninth Street and Fifth Avenue, waiting for a break in traffic which would permit them to cross the street. I was doing the same thing. I had walked from the snug little apartment, which at the moment I was maintaining on Central Park West, across town on my way to attend an auction on Madison Avenue. It was a balmy spring day, the sort of morning which after a blustery March revives one's faith in the miracles of Nature.

Exactly as a pretty girl revives one's faith! I admit that my faith had been revived several times this morning. It seemed to me that all the lovely girls of the universe had been placed in Central Park and on the Avenue this morning, to tantalize me with thoughts of what might have been.

I, who hated the world, loved it this morning. Yet it was the hopeless love of one who knows that the simple joys are denied to him. I felt a moisture welling beneath my lids; my eyes were filmy. Then I laughed at my sentimentality. I had made my choice months ago when, after years of desperate struggle along the paths of honesty, I had given up the unequal battle and become one of those who prey.

Suffice it that no young girl would ever be harmed by me—and even knowing me might some day cause her irreparable damage. As I have said in one of my previous memoirs, like Kipling's cat, I walk alone.

So, because I was in a softened mood, as well as because I am an artist and a gentleman, I felt a surge of pity for the hunchback, and a surge of wrath against the man who stood beside him. For this latter person rubbed the cripple's hump.

Oddly enough, although the lout seemed none too gentle, the cripple did not resent the action. Perhaps, poor devil, he had become so used to the brutalities of his fellows, that his spirit had lost its powers of resentment.

A year or so ago, when I had been crushed by the brutalities of life, I would have felt no indignation at such a sight. I had then been unable to become angry at indignities heaped upon myself. Moralists would tell you that I had since lost my soul, but I tell you that I had found it. A year ago, an honest man, I would have sneered cynically; today, a thief, I took the lout by the collar and threw him across the sidewalk.

The north and south-bound traffic halted as the lights flickered on the tower down the Avenue; the policeman blew his whistle and waved the pedestrians to pass over. It was an opportunity, and as my bewildered victim climbed unaidedly to his feet, muttering threats, I merged with the human tide and gained the doors of a hotel across the street, slipped through its reception-rooms and came out upon Fifty-ninth Street, certain that I had avoided pursuit, and not worrying about future recognition.

As for the hunchback, he had not glanced my way.

By extreme caution, I eliminate accidents. Before I entered the auction-rooms which were my destination, I glanced over my shoulder to make certain that no offensively right-minded person was guiding upon my trail the man whom I had knocked down. If a policeman intervened in a street-brawl in which I was concerned, it is conceivable that I might be asked my means of livelihood, a question of obvious embarrassment.

So I entered the auction-rooms, and took a chair in the rear. Half an hour passed before I made a bid, and then I offered fifty dollars for a mediocre tapestry. I acquired it at eighty-five, gave a check to the attendant, ordered the thing sent to my apartment, and settled back in my chair to watch the rest of the proceedings. I do not think it advisable that I should be merely a spectator at auctions; a con

Officers Had as Much Trouble Then as Now Records Show

Chicago, Ill.—Back in the 'nineties', when the "horseless carriage" was having its first birthday, records show that law enforcers were having trouble with autoists even in that early day. The first item concerning the war between the law and the motorist appears in a Chicago newspaper of 1898, as follows:

"Owners of horseless carriages plan to form an automobile club. One of its first steps will be to fight the order of the South Park board prohibiting automobiles on the boulevards. Montgomery Ward and Robert Shaw drove their electric machines on the boulevards to test the law, but couldn't get themselves arrested. Police looked the other way."

And a few years later appeared the following article:

"Interested citizens of this city are endeavoring to secure the passing of a law to prohibit the driving of horseless carriages near the market place. Several carriages and forgetful autoists have caused much difficulty during the busy hours."

At the present time a movement has been started in the state to bring about an examination for autoists, which must be passed before a license is issued. Adoption of the plan in other states has proven a success, according to promoters of the movement in Illinois, and it is predicted that in a short time an auto driver's examination will be required in every state.

Motor clubs throughout Illinois are sponsoring the plan to eliminate the

Newspaper Men of South Part of State on Picnic

St. Louis, July 18.—(By The Associated Press)—Putting aside the cares of newspaper offices, members of the Southern Illinois Editors' Association leave here today on their annual summer outing for a trip down the Mississippi river to Cairo, Illinois, and return, on board the new steamer, Cape Girardeau.

Howard V. Moran, of Sparta, secretary-treasurer of the association, said reservations indicate the boat would be well filled with members of the editorial party. The river trip has been customary with the association for several years.

A two hour stop will be made Saturday afternoon at Cairo, where the party will be entertained by the Cairo newspaper publishers and the Cairo chamber of commerce. A short stop will be made at Cape Girardeau earlier in the day. The steamer is scheduled to stop at St. Louis at 7 a. m. Monday morning after two days and three nights on the river.

The election of officers will take place on the boat Saturday morning. L. M. Wood of Florio, is president and J. M. Dunn of Divernon, vice president.

One of the important questions to be discussed is a resolution favoring a sworn post office circulation statement for weekly as well as daily newspapers. Action on this resolution was deferred at the annual meeting last March.

THE NUT CRACKER

True, losing the 100-meter dash to Mr. Abrahams, the Jewish boy, was unexpected. . . Mr. Abrahams was expected, it seems, but not so soon.

In the 200 meters your uncle led a stylish Paddock and trumped him with an orange Sholz. . . Your uncle is only snuffler in coral who can frighten something higher than ace out of deck.

Your uncle leaped so far in winning broad jump that mothers in neighboring villages brought their children out to see strange two-legged dirgible touching all bases in the skies.

Your uncle made clean sweep in burly shotput. Winning ball cleared French boundary and hit kaiser's long.

Europe can't savvy handsome difference between your uncle as statesman and athlete. As statesman, Europe can take him for everything, including a choice boob, but as athlete he performs like bright young fellow with all his marbles.

Far the First Time in Motor Car History

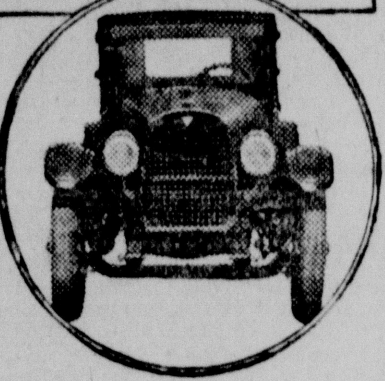

The first enclosed car in history ever to sell for an open car price is the newly announced Hudson coach. Mounted on the standard Super-Six chassis, it sells at an identical mark with the Hudson phaeton, a seven-passenger open car.

For two or three years, the gap between the cost of an open and an enclosed car has been narrowing. There have been forecasts from time to time that this gap would finally close. Now that day is here.

Since the fall of 1921, the Hudson Motor Car Co. has specialized on its coaches, a type of body which it created. These coaches have now become 75 per cent of Hudson's business, so that all the well known economies of quantity production may be applied to them. There is more material and more labor in an enclosed car than in an open one, but the larger volume on the coaches makes up this difference.

In the Essex, which it manufactures in the same plant with the Super-Six, Hudson has a coach which still sells at a slight advance over the open car price. But the gap is very narrow—lower in fact than in any other make of car except the Hudson.

Both Hudson and Essex cars are now equipped with full size balloon tires.

Besides the coaches, there are the Hudson speedster, phaeton, and 5-passenger and 7-passenger sedan and the Essex touring car.

Stretching Your Fuel Dollar
GREEN COLONIAL
the Standard of Economy Value

When you install a COLONIAL furnace, you get a full dollar's worth of warmth and comfort from every dollar you spend.

The COLONIAL Better Heating Principle makes it possible to liberate more heat from the fuel. Fully 40% more heat is provided by the COLONIAL. Think of the fuel saving!

With the COLONIAL'S dome-shaped heat chamber, the flame and heated gas rise and strike directly against the entire surface. Not merely the top as in ordinary furnaces.

Other exclusive COLONIAL features are important. Improved Radiator traps the heat that ordinarily escapes with the smoke and directs it into the heat pipes, cutting fuel bills still more.

Double Feed Doors admit largest pieces of fuel which burn slower than smaller pieces.

We are anxious to give you further facts about the COLONIAL—one furnace that's back to its 1917 price.

Build into your roof this rare new color

the mellow tan of autumn fields permanently fixed in slate

THE day of the drab roof has gone. A beautiful roofing color has been discovered, which brings to the slate-surfaced shingle entirely new color effects.

This rare tone, weathered brown, gives to your roof the mellow tan of autumn fields, permanently fixed in slate. And only in the Richardson quarries is it found.

Weathered brown will also please you when it is blended with other Richardson Super-Giant Shingles in jade green, tile red, or black pearl.

Weathered brown is used exclusively on the Richardson Super-Giant Shingle—a remarkably improved roofing product. Its greater size (10" x 14") saves 35% in cost of laying. Its 50% greater thickness makes it last much longer. And its 100% greater stiffness keeps it rigid in all sorts of weather.

Moreover, its inner materials, Richardson felt and Viskalt, give conclusive evidence of its endurance. And Richardson Super-Giants are equally good for new or over-the-old-roof jobs.

Come in and see this shingle—and the other Richardson roofing products. Or, if you prefer, telephone and we will come to you.
